Additionally, I have been a Guardian ad Litem with Hennepin County - representing the voice of children in court for child protection cases. Lastly, I am on the review panel for Hennepin County Housing grants. I spent the first eight years of my legal career as a public defender in Minneapolis representing the City's citizens in criminal matters. I have often referred clients to the Commission to address allegations of discrimination in housing. As a judge, I now adjudicate disputes between Minnesotans and the Department of Human Services. I served as a board member for the Minnesota Association for Criminal Defense Lawyers and organized education for attorneys on subject matters that included race, ethnic diversity, and collateral consequences of convictions on jobs and housing.
