

Telling Our Health Story: The 2024-28 Community Health Assessment

A community health assessment tells the story of our community's health. It uses different types of data to look at many health topics in the Minneapolis.

Within the full assessment, we present data to share how close Minneapolis is to meeting health targets and how different communities within Minneapolis are doing.

Health inequities continue to exist between racial groups, even while progress continues in improving the health of all people in Minneapolis.

Key Parts of the Community Health Assessment

A community profile: Minneapolis is proud of our diverse, vibrant community. As a city we value health and wellbeing for people who live, work, stay, and play here.

Health in context: As a community health board, we serve everyone who lives, works, and plays in Minneapolis. We focus on those whom our data indicates are the most at risk for poor health outcomes.

Community Health Priorities

There are many needs across our community. While we serve all members of our community, we prioritize issues to help direct the work of the health department. Our community health priorities are:

- Priority 1: Chronic stress from unmet basic needs
- Priority 2: Substance use and prevention services
- Priority 3: Maternal, child, and family health (including infant mortality and adolescent health)
- Priority 4: Infectious disease prevention and control
- Priority 5: Adolescent mental health and wellbeing
